Description

A fold-away desk inside a cabinet, known as a "magic box," made of light mahogany in the 1950s and originating from Argentina. It bears a plaque from the seller, HARRODS, a branch of the famous London department store. There is an electrical outlet on the back connected to a drawer in the center of the piece, which opens to reveal a glass panel at the back that serves as lighting (electrical system not checked; needs to be replaced). Sold with its chair .In good structural condition; the left door rubs slightly when opening and closing (nothing serious), with a few stains and discoloration due to the piece's age. Dimensions when closed: height 120 cm, width 92,5 cm depth 43 cm
