Description

An elegant white marble sculpture depicting Guanyin, the deity symbolizing mercy, compassion, and serenity in the Buddhist tradition, created in the first half of the 20th century. The work stands out for its refined craftsmanship, characterized by a gentle, meditative facial expression, a richly ornamented headdress, and meticulous rendering of the robes, animated by soft folds that lend harmony and movement to the composition. The figure is depicted in a seated position, in accordance with traditional iconography, with an air of calm and contemplation that enhances its strong symbolic and decorative value. Crafted from finely carved white marble, the sculpture features a pleasing natural patina that enhances its charm and elegance. In good overall condition for its age,
