Description

Oil on canvas.18th-century European school.A charming, idealized landscape depicting a mountainous valley spanned by a two-arched stone bridge. In the foreground, a herd of cattle drinks from a stream while a seated figure contemplates the scene. On a hilltop, near their sheep, two shepherds gaze out over the valley. In the background, the hills bathed in a rosy light create a gentle and poetic atmosphere, characteristic of 18th-century landscape painting.The composition, which is very well balanced, skillfully alternates the dark masses of the foreground with the luminous vista toward the mountains. The rendering of atmospheric effects, the warm tones of the rocks, and the discreet presence of the figures are reminiscent of Italianate landscapes, which were highly popular
