Description

An authentic warthog tusk from Mozambique, dated 1967 and mounted on a custom-made wooden base. This attractive collector's item combines natural history, safari heritage, and decorative appeal. Collected during the golden age of African safaris, this tusk serves as a fascinating testament to hunting and exploration in Southern Africa in the mid-20th century.The tusk features the characteristic curved shape and natural coloration unique to the African warthog. Its elegance and naturally polished surface highlight the material's remarkable structure, while the wooden base enhances its presentation and allows it to be displayed as a sculpture.Its provenance adds to its historical interest, directly linking the piece to Mozambique in 1967. These mounted trophies were traditionally displayed in
