Description

African buffalo trophy from Mozambique, dating from the 1960s. Representing one of Africa's most powerful and revered animals, this trophy embodies the spirit of the golden age of safaris and remains a highly sought-after collector's item. The African buffalo, a member of the legendary "Big Five," is renowned for its strength, resilience, and imposing presence. This specimen features the massive, curved horns characteristic of the species, which have made it one of the most iconic symbols of African wildlife. Mounted in the traditional safari style, the trophy has an imposing presence and exceptional decorative appeal. The natural shape of the horns, combined with the buffalo's power, creates a superb wall piece that fits equally well in both classic and contemporary
