Description

An African buffalo trophy from Mozambique, dated 1966, retaining its original brass identification tag. This remarkable piece is representative of the great African safaris of the mid-20th century and combines historical provenance with strong decorative appeal. The African buffalo is one of the most iconic members of Africa's legendary "Big Five," admired for its strength, resilience, and imposing presence. This trophy features the massive, curved horns characteristic of the species, giving it a striking and imposing presence. Mounted in the traditional safari style, the trophy is highlighted by its original brass identification plate, which attests to its origin and date. These plaques are highly sought after by collectors as they guarantee the piece's authenticity and offer a
