Description

This small mahogany sideboard from the 1900s exudes a discreet and refined presence, enhanced by the warm depth of its wood, whose hues blend with a fine grain that reveals the noble character of mahogany, while its slender and perfectly proportioned silhouette embodies an aesthetic typical of the Belle Époque, where functionality blends with understated elegance. Opening the door reveals shelves mounted on rails, designed to hold books or small objects. The door, accented by a chiseled brass key, adds a touch of vintage charm that enhances the piece's authenticity. The piece is both practical and decorative, compact in size and shallow in depth, capable of blending naturally into a classic interior or a more contemporary setting seeking a touch of warmth.Period: 1900Restored
