Description

This striking Cubist-style head sculpture, created in terracotta in the 1970s, is a unique work that reflects the influence of the Cubist movement. It is characterized by its bold geometric forms, fragmented planes, and innovative interpretation of the human figure.Unlike traditional sculptural portraits, the artist has deconstructed the facial features into a dynamic composition of angular volumes and intersecting surfaces, creating a powerful visual dialogue between abstraction and figuration. The result is a sculpture that reveals different perspectives and expressions depending on the viewing angle, embodying the revolutionary spirit of 20th-century modern art.Crafted from terracotta, the piece features a rich texture and warm, earthy tones that highlight the sculptural forms and underscore the work's
