Description

This charming pair of bronze putti with a brown patina embodies all the decorative refinement of the 19th century, an era when art drew freely on classical models to offer a sensitive and elegant interpretation of them. Each finely chiseled figure depicts a young putto kneeling, his torso slightly turned, in a lively and graceful pose. The delicately modeled facial features, along with the curly hair, attest to particularly meticulous sculptural work. The drapery, rendered with fluidity, adds a touch of movement and softness to the overall composition. The putti rest on solid black marble pedestals. A gold-plated beadwork trim accentuates the center of each base, adding a touch of refinement and creating a striking luminous contrast. Distinctive decorative pieces, these bronzes will form a harmonious pair on a
