Description

The openwork, plant-inspired design reveals an undeniable stylistic harmony. The solid iron piece requires five people to complete. A blacksmith, one person who hammers the metal, another who draws it out, one who checks the alignment, and a final person who creates the movement. The work of shaping the rod with a whip-like suction flattening technique offers a signature style and admirable craftsmanship. The alternation of curves, counter-curves, and waves, combined with asymmetry, is worthy of Guimard's work. Even the upper torch-shaped section displays unparalleled mastery. Its size is spectacular. The aged, rusted patina and dried, naturalized moss add even more authenticity. A rare piece. Shipping available (not included in the price).
