Description

Oil on canvas from the late 19th century depicting a naval battle scene, with a Renaissance-style oared galley at its center. The work, clearly historically inspired, features an allegorical female figure in the upper right corner, surrounded by cherubs, waving a tricolor flag (red, white, and presumably green) and holding a commander's baton surmounted by an eagle (symbol of imperial power). These iconographic elements recall the symbolism common in celebratory depictions of naval battles, where the female figure appears in the heavens as an emblem of victory and glory. She is gliding toward the armored soldier lying wounded on a rock in the lower left, gazing toward the celestial figure who is coming to recognize her patriotic value. The use of color and light emphasize the dramatic atmosphere. The arrangement of the elements with poorly defined outlines despite the richness of the details, harks back to the production of the late nineteenth century. The canvas has widespread loss of paint and requires restoration. It is presented in a period frame. The item is in good condition, with minor signs of wear. We try to present the item's actual condition as accurately as possible with the photos. If any details are unclear from the photos, the description will apply.
