Description

The level of rarity is simply extraordinary. Although he had few resources, the stonemason mastered the technique. The chisel and sledgehammer were certainly used to rough-hew the exterior. The interior was carved using a awl or achisel. The soft stone reveals all its flaws and irregularities. The thickness of the base and sides highlights its historical significance. The handholds on each side invite the wear of time, as well as a sense of simplicity. Although it has been restored and glued, it can be placed outdoors. Delivery available (not included in the price)
