Description

An elegant light oak sideboard from the Louis XV period, crafted in the Valenciennes region during the second half of the 18th century. The front features two waist drawers and two molded doors with ornate panels, revealing an interior fitted with a single shelf. The sides feature flat panels, and the piece rests on a carved base (the legs have been restored in the original style), characteristic of regional production. The quality of the oak, the traditional joinery, the wide antique planks, and the bronze dowels typical of the Valenciennes region attest to its authentic 18th-century craftsmanship. This sideboard has retained all of its original simplicity and charm. It features a beautiful light patina and offers functional storage space, including an interior shelf, while maintaining dimensions that fit easily
