Period : 19th century

Condition : Restauré

Description

Oil on canvas depicting a young man in a half-length portrait, wearing a dark frock coat over a brown waistcoat with woven trim, a high-collared shirt, and a black tie held in place by a small pin. His hairstyle, thin mustache, and attire are characteristic of men's fashion during the Louis-Philippe era. The painter focuses on the face, whose skin tones, blue eyes, and serene expression are rendered with care. The plain gray-green background highlights the subject and emphasizes the intimate nature of this composition. Presented unframed, the painting is preserved on its original canvas and stretcher. It has undergone restoration by a professional conservator. A few small, older perforations have been selectively repaired. Overall, the painting is now in very good condition. Dimensions:
