Description

This oil-on-canvas painting depicts a large bouquet of flowers in a smoked-glass vase on a mantelpiece, set against a dark, Dutch-inspired background. The composition features roses, peonies, passionflowers, forget-me-nots, delphiniums, and morning glories, rendered with a keen eye for botanical detail. Based on its style, color palette, and the quality of its execution, this work is attributed to Johan Laurentz Jensen (1800-1856), a Danish painter known for his floral compositions. The canvas underwent restoration some time ago following a dent in the upper right corner. This was professionally smoothed out. Slight concentric marks remain and are visible under certain lighting conditions. Presented in its gilded wooden frame. Canvas: 90 × 78 cm
