Description

Vermeil (gold-plated silver) set consisting of a water pitcher and its tray. Baluster-shaped water pitcher resting on a circular pedestal decorated with a frieze of pearls and rope. The bulging body is embellished with twisted gadroons halfway up. The neck, which narrows and then flares at the top, forms a wide opening finished with a scalloped rim and a broad spout, accented by a frieze of rope and twisted gadroons. The imposing handle, with three attachment points, is formed of volutes and counter-curves, richly carved with rocaille motifs and acanthus leaves. Echoing the ewer's decoration, the circular tray rests on a discreet base. It features a slight central depression surrounded by domed gadroons in radiating twists, while the rim is accented by a rope-motif frieze. 20th-century Italian
