artisans whose father, son, and grandson all bore the same first name, Pierre. Both cabinetmakers and merchants, they worked during the reign of Louis XV. The first, Pierre I, did not sign his works, as the use of a stamp did not become mandatory until 1743. The second and most renowned, Pierre II, produced a great deal of furniture and commissioned work from his colleagues. Pierre III devoted himself primarily to the furniture trade. The Migeon workshop enjoyed great prosperity. The pieces are of exceptional quality. Two hallmarks are known: "MIGEON"; only the size of the letters differs.
