Description

Crafted in France during the early 19th-century, this elegant cherrywood side table embodies the understated refinement of provincial furniture from the period. Its clean architectural lines, gently tapered legs, and beautifully proportioned silhouette make it a timeless piece that blends effortlessly into both traditional and contemporary interiors. The rectangular top is framed by a delicately mitred border surrounding a central panel, highlighting the natural warmth and fine grain of the cherrywood. Rich honey and golden-brown tones have developed over time, giving the table a wonderful depth of colour and authentic patina. A single discreet drawer, fitted with a simple brass knob, offers practical storage while preserving the table's restrained elegance. Traditional joinery is visible throughout, reflecting the quality craftsmanship of the period. The table remains sturdy and functional, making it ideal as a writing table, lamp table, console, bedside table, or occasional accent piece. Signs of age, including light surface wear, small marks, and natural imperfections, are consistent with its age and contribute to its genuine antique character without detracting from its overall appeal. A versatile and authentic early 19th-century French antique, this table offers both practical use and timeless decorative charm.
