Description

An important pair of harlequin figurines FROM THE COMMEDIA DELL'ARTE in early 20th-century Italian majolica, by CECCARELLI on pedestals, depicting a man and a woman, each wearing a top hat, striped pants, and a red shirt. Majolica-style earthenware, on pedestals. Each figurine, composed of two parts, depicts a buffoon and a female buffoon, in a style reminiscent of Maures' sculptures. Dressed in matching red, black, and yellow costumes, they are depicted dancing in opposite positions, with their heads tilted and arms raised. Each figurine rests on a removable fluted pedestal, adorned with hanging green and orange fruits at the corners. Signed "Ceccarelli" on the base. Approximate height: 145 cm (55.25 inches) for each figurine, 106 cm (41.75 inches) for the

This authentic passion is evident in the raw material, which they transform into prestigious, expertly crafted ceramics. The Ceccarelli ceramists like to say that the result is a testament to their efforts. Indeed, the irregularities typical of handcrafted work, as well as the complexity of the finishes--achieved through 10 different manufacturing steps--are at the heart of their distinctive style.
