Description

Magnificent hand-knotted Persian rug measuring 137 x 220 cm. This rug is a masterful example of the classic "Tree of Life" motif featuring birds, executed with remarkable finesse and attention to detail. Composition and Design The composition centers on a rich, bright red field, adorned with a large and elegant Tree of Life whose flowering branches extend across the entire height of the rug. This tree is populated by a veritable menagerie of finely detailed exotic birds: Two majestic peacocks, symbols of royalty and immortality, are placed on either side of the base of the trunk. Their tails are spread wide, revealing their distinctive ocelli patterns. A pair of large wading birds (probably herons or storks), with long, graceful necks, is prominently positioned in the upper register. Numerous other smaller birds, with varied plumage (pheasants, small passerines), are perched on the branches, amid dense, flower-filled foliage. At the base of the tree, more complex flowers and detailed plant motifs can be seen against a slightly contrasting background. The central field is framed by several distinct borders: The main border is particularly impressive, featuring large medallions alternating on a deep turquoise-green background, filled with intricate palmettes and golden and red flowers. Narrower secondary borders--one inner (on an ivory background with intertwined vine motifs) and one outer (on a gold background with almond motifs)--flank the main border, adding depth and contrast. Notably, there are calligraphic Persian inscriptions within a cartouche at the top of the main border, a sign of additional prestige.
