Description

Mid-19th-century French table in the Charles X style, crafted from fine mahogany. The oval tabletop, featuring warm grain and a refined shellac finish, can be extended using extension leaves, making it ideal both as a dining table and for prestigious reception areas. The edge is embellished with a delicate, carved band featuring a continuous motif--a detail typical of Charles X-style furniture--which lends the piece further elegance. The central support consists of a sturdy turned shaft with a pod-like motif that sits atop a finely carved four-part base. The four curved legs end in carved scrolls and are embellished with refined floral motifs and volutes, a testament to the French craftsmanship of the era.
