Description

A monumental clock made of bronze and Sienese yellow marble depicting "Apollo," the Greek god of beauty, the arts, and light. It rests on a Sienese yellow marble base adorned with a circular dial featuring Roman numerals. The base is embellished with a frieze of palmettes and acanthus leaves resting on finely crafted feet. Restoration period: circa 1815; string-wound movement; in good working condition. H. 68 cm, 34 kg. In early 19th-century French clockmaking, Apollo is frequently depicted as a naked or semi-naked young man accompanied by a quiver and arrows.
