

Accolay Pottery: Large Glazed Ceramic Anthropomorphic Vase Depicting A Figure

580 EUR

Signature : Poterie d'ACCOLAY

Period : 20th century

Condition : Parfait état

Material : Ceramic

Description

ACCOLAY Pottery Large sculpture, anthropomorphic flower vase made of glazed ceramic depicting a female figure with openwork on the sides. Typical polychrome glazes (yellow, ochre, blue), painted front decorations signed "Accolay - FDM - 14" on the base. Very good overall condition

1960s/70s Dimensions: Height: 36.5 cm triangular base: 12 cm
Once upon a time.... Accolay Pottery, 1945 In the village, many don't remember how they ended up there: "They just showed up, that's all," some say, much like arriving in Burgundy when you don't know where you're fleeing from. Their names were André Boutaud, Slavik Palley, Louis Dangon, and a man named Raude (or Rodet) Yet they hadn't come from very far away. After swinging to the sound of jazz in the

Dealer

LA COMTESSE G
Antiquités

Mobile : 0767281188

32 rue docteur Claussat
Clermont-Ferrand 63100

cellars of Saint-Germain-des-Près, these four bohemians--who had refused to participate in the STO (Compulsory Labor Service)--sought to lay low. So they left Paris and found a welcoming haven in the ceramics studio at the vocational high school in Mâcon, then directed by the Cluny-based potter, Alexandre Kostanda. The man who would soon go on to create delicate works in the vibrant artistic milieu of Vallauris alongside Jean Derval, Roger Capron, and Robert Picault served as a mentor to the four young artists. Accolay was their shared signature. It was a place where the idea of a community of potters was reinvented.