Description

A sculpture in the round depicting Saint Sebastian, created in Flanders in the 17th century. The saint is depicted tied to a tree trunk, in a pose that exudes nobility and serenity. His body, rendered in a naturalistic style, reveals powerful and harmoniously modeled musculature. His face, with delicate features and a resigned expression, conveys spirituality, while the perizonium, with its soft folds, enlivens the composition with an elegant interplay of drapery. The work retains significant traces of its original polychromy as well as its patina. Origin: Flanders Period: 17th century Material: carved linden wood Dimensions: 101
