Description

Charming little earthenware oil cruet, late 18th or early 19th century, complete with its bottles and lids. It looks as if it came straight from an old store--the lids are still tied on with old string. Identifying the place of origin remains difficult because it is a somewhat rustic piece, which is also part of its charm. Nevers is a likely candidate, but this is not certain. A few small chips, but in beautiful original condition.
