Description

The major Parisian jewelry houses vied with one another in creativity at the end of the 19th century to satisfy the tastes of an international clientele. This design for a drop-style brooch, richly adorned with diamonds and topped with a crown decorated with pearls, demonstrates the virtuosity required to create it. The sketch is anonymous, but its opulence shows that this design was intended for a wealthy clientele. Framed in a small 1920s-style frame, it is a nod to the exuberant luxury of days gone by.
