Description

An elegant bronze sculpture with a brown-green patina depicting a young stag, crafted in the spirit of the famous Grand Tour souvenirs from the late 19th and early 20th centuries. This work is inspired by an ancient Roman model, the originals of which were discovered during archaeological excavations and widely admired by European travelers. The stag is depicted in a calm and natural pose, with its head slightly turned, and its forms rendered with a sober and harmonious treatment of volume reminiscent of classical aesthetics. The delicacy of the facial features, the long proportions of the neck, and the refined forms attest to a faithful interpretation of ancient bronzes. The sculpture rests on a rectangular bronze base, giving it an elegant and stable appearance. Its beautiful, nuanced patina,
