Description

A charming 1900s-era parlor side table, with a trilobed shape reminiscent of a three-leaf clover, featuring three drawers arranged in a fan-like pattern. A rare piece of furniture inspired by Freemasonry or associated with divination and spiritualism. The entire piece is decorated with a superb sea-green faux marble paint finish, executed with great skill. This remarkable work by a decorative painter realistically reproduces the veins and shades of precious marble. The top is embellished with an elegant compass rose painted in a polychrome wood-like style, which adds a refined decorative touch and harmoniously enlivens the composition. The three drawers, each fitted with its own bronze pull, offer practical storage while highlighting the original silhouette of this unusual piece of furniture. The bronze
