

Important 18th-century Louis XVI-style Screen In Embroidered And Painted Silk

3 500 EUR

Period : 18th century

Condition : Très bon état

Material : Silk

Description

Large three-panel folding screen from the 18th century, made of embroidered and painted silk, featuring rich allegorical and naturalistic decoration. Each panel displays remarkable decorative work combining birds, flower bouquets, garlands of foliage, putti, medallions with antique profiles, and fantastical animals in the neoclassical style of the late 18th century. The finesse of the embroidery and polychrome highlights against a background of moiré silk attests to work of the highest quality, likely commissioned for an aristocratic interior or a reception hall. The panels are framed with gilded wooden moldings. A very elegant design featuring symmetrical compositions inspired by Louis XVI decorative arts, with a refined iconography combining abundance, nature, and music. In good

Dealer

Leleu Antiquités

Généraliste

Mobile : 0607415540

Varredes 77910

overall condition, with wear and minor imperfections consistent with its age. A spectacular decorative piece, equally suitable as a room divider or a wall hanging. Period: late 18th century - Style: Louis XVI / Neoclassical Materials: embroidered silk, polychrome threads, gilded wood Dimensions: 160 cm high x 53 cm per panel x 3" French or Italian work in the style of Lyon silks" decor evoking 18th-century arabesque cartoons influence of grotesques and Pompeian ornamentation" DELIVERY ONLY IN PARIS AND THE ÎLE-DE-FRANCE REGION FOR 85.00 EUROS For delivery to other locations, please provide your ZIP code and city so I can make a request with the carriers