Description

Large Chinese porcelain vase with a light celadon base, hand-painted with an elegant figurative scene depicting graceful ladies in a garden, enhanced by flowering trees, architectural elements, and landscape motifs. On the back is a long calligraphic inscription in Chinese characters executed with a brush, a decorative element typical of pieces produced for both the domestic and export markets between the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The vase has a slender shape with a wide, flared neck and elegant openwork handles attached to the sides. The decoration is rendered in a palette of delicate tones, dominated by blue, pink, green, and black. It is in good condition, with no visible restorations. There are only slight signs of wear consistent with the object's age. Its impressive size makes it a striking
