Description

A beautiful and dynamic late 19th-century oil on canvas titled "Ships", depicting a lively scene of fishermen on the high seas. The work realistically captures the hard work of the sailors aboard two sailing rowboats, busily hauling in heavy fishing nets amid a choppy sea of white caps. The artist, Van der Brie (Dutch), demonstrates excellent mastery of marine painting. The composition is particularly successful: light pierces through a low, heavy stormy sky, striking the wind-filled sails with full force and creating a striking contrast with the translucency of the foaming water. In the background, other ships cut through the waves beneath a flock of seagulls, enhancing the depth and authenticity of this maritime scene. The work is presented in its large and sumptuous period frame made of wood and
