Description

Set of six Renaissance-style chairs in oak and leather. An elegant set of six solid oak chairs in the Renaissance style, dating from the early 20th century. They are distinguished by their sturdy, architecturally designed structure, resting on X-shaped legs connected by crossbars--a hallmark of Renaissance-inspired furniture. The backs and seats are upholstered in thick brown leather, stretched and secured by a neat row of brass tacks, emphasizing their authentic character. The warm patina of the wood and leather gives them timeless charm and a beautiful decorative presence. Very comfortable and stable, these chairs fit just as well around a large dining table as they do in a characterful home, an office, or a library. The set is in very good condition, with its original patina and slight signs of wear consistent
