Description

An elegant and powerful early 20th-century bronze sculpture depicting a greyhound (reminiscent of the wire-haired variety or lurcher) standing on a naturalistic terrace. The animal is captured in a poised stance of great nobility, its body taut, head held high, and alert gaze turned toward the horizon, perfectly conveying the liveliness and innate grace of this breed. As can be seen, the artist RICHARD demonstrates a keen eye for anatomical detail. The chiseling is particularly meticulous, realistically highlighting the powerful muscular contours as well as the fine, slightly wavy texture of the coat. The sculpture rests on a richly textured bronze base imitating earthen ground, signed by the artist's hand. It features a beautiful original dark brown patina, enhanced by delicate golden highlights.
