Description

Friedrich Goldscheider (1845-1897). The Young Napoleon II, Duke of Reichstadt, son of Napoleon I, depicted in his youth wearing a military uniform. The eagle with outstretched wings, carved in gilded relief at the base of the bust, is a direct reference to his historical nickname and to the symbols of the Napoleonic Empire. This model was created by the French sculptor Louis Oury (1867-1940). The bust is signed on the shoulder. Bibliography: In 1892, Friedrich Goldscheider founded a subsidiary of his Viennese manufactory in Paris. It bore the name Frédéric Goldscheider and was managed by his son Arthur Golscheider beginning in 1900. It had a warehouse at 25 Rue du Paradis and a retail store at 28 Avenue de l'Opéra. Rue du Paradis was also home to the bronze foundry and the
