Description

Embroidered and gouache-painted silk panel depicting the baptism of Jesus Christ by John the Baptist. 19th-century panel. Superb work executed on natural silk. The areas depicting skin are painted with gouache and varnished. The embroidery is done with very fine silk thread, using silk chenille stitches to highlight the foliage of the trees. The relief effects are achieved through flat-stitch embroidery worked in different directions to play with the sheen of the silk. The scene is rendered with extreme finesse. The colors are still very vibrant. The background is painted in watercolor. The waters of the Jordan River are embroidered with very fine silk threads to create a translucent effect. Good overall condition: some signs of age. Mounted on a wooden frame but not framed. H: 66.5 cm W: 54 cm
