Description

Oil on poplar panel depicting the Virgin Mary Enthroned, a work attributed to the Central Italian School of the late 16th-early 17th century. The composition is dominated by the figure of the Virgin supporting the Baby Jesus, who holds an apple in his hands, symbolizing the "new Adam" the one who will redeem humanity from original sin. Two angels hover above the Virgin, holding a crown symbolizing her royalty and role in the plan of salvation. Despite previous restoration, the panel shows some visible paint loss, while the wooden structure has been reinforced on the back to ensure stability. Product Condition: The item is in good condition, with minor signs of wear. We try to present the item's actual condition as accurately as possible with the photos.
