Description

A charming vintage horse sculpture in patinated plaster with a bronze finish, signed by J. Smatt for Austin Productions. Austin Productions was founded in Brooklyn, New York, in 1952, producing reproductions of classical Egyptian, Greek, and Roman sculptures. The company quickly diversified to include African, Asian, and contemporary pieces. It remains best known for its hand-cast Durastone and bronze reproductions, as well as its hand-painted marble pieces. Austin Productions has built a reputation for high-quality reproductions that have become collector's items. The company has reproduced thousands of pieces over the years, and items that have been discontinued command high collector's value. The discontinuation of the entire product line in 2009 gave rise to a dynamic market of dealers
