Description

Canadian Indigenous art: a beautiful anthropomorphic wooden sculpture by John Joseph (born in 1957), inspired by the faces of Indigenous peoples from southwestern Canada, particularly the Salish people. This powerful yet exquisitely delicate work attests to the artist's virtuosity. John Joseph, originally from North Vancouver (Canada), is a sculptor renowned for his wood carvings. At the age of fourteen, he was trained by his uncle Larry Joseph and later worked alongside his cousins Delmar and Darcy Joseph. In recent years, he has devoted himself to creating large-scale pieces. Well known among Canadian and American art enthusiasts, John Joseph has a permanent exhibition at the Nanaimo Art Gallery (Canada). Dimensions: Height 9 cm (16 cm with the base) x Width 5.8
