Description

Egyptian alabaster funerary vase, Middle Kingdom (2033-1786 B.C.). Egyptian Archaeology This remarkable piece stands out for its unusual form: a cylindrical vase with a long neck resting on a small pedestal, with particularly elegant proportions. Measuring 17.7 cm in height and 6 cm in diameter, it is a large specimen, a quality rarely found in this type of vessel. The vase is carved from high-quality Egyptian alabaster. It is in very good condition, with only a few tiny chips on the rim. The interior retains traces of the tools used during its manufacture, indicating that it was shaped on a potter's wheel. The slight irregularities in the pedestal, as well as the variations in the lip's thickness--ranging from 3 mm to 5 mm--perfectly illustrate the artisanal craftsmanship of Egyptian workshops of that
