Description

light-holding stand This is a small, freestanding piece of furniture. These stands were easily moved and used to hold lights, torches, candlesticks, or candelabras; they would later be called "torch holders." This stand consists of a twisted central column with a knot in the center; at each end is a turned and molded shelf. The entire piece rests on three small, ball-shaped turned feet. In good overall condition, it has retained its beautiful original patina. Dimensions: height cm. diameter of lower tray cm, upper tray cm.
