Description

An elegant, small, freestanding 19th-century tripod table. It immediately captivates you with its delicate lines and the quality of its craftsmanship, typical of refined parlor furniture. Its removable marble top is intact and features beautifully veined contours.The veined shades of gray, white, and subtle salmon highlights provide a superb, mineral-like contrast to the warmth of the wood. A curved, sinuous band that perfectly hugs the shape of the marble.It features delicate marquetry of precious wood in a frieze pattern, highlighted by fine contrasting fillets that form elegant cartouches on each side. The tripod base, gracefully arched, visually accentuates its airy, floating appearance.The band incorporates a small drawer, discreet from the front, which opens with a gilded brass pull knob.
