Description

This remarkable forest edge by the Belgian artist "Jacques Méchin" , exhibited in Brussels at the Petite Galerie in 1948, is a large oil on canvas mounted on a key-frame stretcher, divinely framed in a carved "Bérain" Regency-style frame from the period of the work and selected by the artist; the characterful painting, with its lovely shades of green and generous application of paint, offers us a decorative and inspired work that beautifully captures the postwar era and its quiet, peaceful world. The perfect harmony between the frame--with its lovely patina--and the subject of a woodland scene contributes to a painting that is not without charm and possesses strong decorative value; in short, a beautiful painting in perfect original condition from the mid-20th century by a renowned artist.
