Description

Early 19th-century oil on canvas depicting a stroll in a park; this may be the painter's home in Versailles. A family scene in a rustic style, rendered with great precision. Beautiful lighting. Painting signed "Grolig" in the lower right corner. Curt Victor Clemens Grolig (1805-1862) Self-taught, he began exhibiting his still lifes--flowers and fruits--in Dresden as early as 1822. From 1827 onward, he studied at the Dresden Academy of Fine Arts under Johan Christian Dahl until 1833. He then traveled through northern Germany, Denmark, Norway, and the Netherlands. In 1838, he returned to Munich, visited Algeria in 1842, and then arrived in Paris, where he studied under Hippolyte Lazerges and Benjamin Roubaud. He exhibited at the Salon from 1844 to 1861. In 1845, he was
