Description

An important example of mid-18th-century Roman cabinetmaking, this refined console table stands out for the exceptional quality of its carving and the richness of its decorative elements. The frame, crafted from finely carved and gilded wood, features an elegant, undulating design with sinuous legs, volutes, foliage motifs, and rich ornamental elements in the full Rococo style, executed with great mastery. The contoured top is embellished with a precious stone inlay composed of chalcedony marble and Pallino Verde delle Alpi, materials of exceptional value that lend the surface a refined chromatic effect and extraordinary decorative depth. The combination of these semi-precious stones enhances the piece's monumental character, making it a work of great visual
