Description

Restoration-era Armchair, circa 1820-1830 An elegant Restoration-era armchair made of finely carved wood, featuring the understated design characteristic of the 1820s and 1830s. The chair rests on four tapered, fluted legs, with the scroll-shaped armrests supported by fluted baluster-style brackets. The connecting blocks are adorned with carved rosettes. At the end of the 19th century, the armchair underwent a restoration of its finish, with the decoration re-lacquered in ivory tones and partial gilding highlighting the carvings--a testament to the era's taste for bringing antique seating back into fashion. It is upholstered in petit point tapestry featuring a scattered pattern of floral medallions on a deep red background--a high-quality decorative piece that harmonizes perfectly with
