Description

A pair of majestic 17th-century Italian Baroque architectural columns. A rare and fascinating pair of structural columns dating back to 17th-century Italy, originally designed as prestigious architectural elements and now perfect for creating a monumental bookshelf, a display cabinet, or a striking decorative installation. Crafted from solid wood, entirely hand-lacquered with a dark gray-green base coat (original period lacquer) and richly decorated with authentic, well-preserved gold and silver leaf. The surfaces feature a noble, weathered patina, with exquisite carved and gilded details: elaborate capitals and molded bases with beaded and corded motifs, phytomorphic friezes, elegant volutes, and a refined central mask depicting a winged cherub on each pedestal. Its imposing proportions and extraordinary craftsmanship make it a unique collector's piece, ideal for classic, Baroque, or eclectic interiors. In good, original condition, with signs of age that enhance its authenticity and antique charm. A piece worthy of a museum or a prestigious residence--it is extremely rare to find examples with the original lacquer and precious metals still intact after more than three centuries.
