Description

Roman console table in gilded wood and Portoro marble
Rome, first quarter of the 18th century
An important Roman console table featuring an elegant structure of finely carved and gilded wood, embellished with a magnificent Nero Portoro marble top. Its generous dimensions (180 × 70 × 113 cm) and the richness of the carving make it a piece of great prestige with a strong visual impact. The curved legs, connected by richly carved crossbars, lend lightness and balance to the piece as a whole, while the original gilding highlights every detail of the carving. The top is crafted from fine Nero Portoro marble and is distinguished by its deep black background crisscrossed by spectacular golden and ivory veins. A material reserved over the centuries for the most prestigious patrons, Portoro is one of the
