Description

An elegant bronze sculpture depicting a young girl, created in the refined and romantic style of the famous French sculptor Hippolyte Moreau (1832-1927). The sculpture depicts a graceful young girl holding flowers in her hands, dressed in a richly draped gown. At her side is a tree stump accompanied by a decorative basket, while the natural base is adorned with finely crafted leaves and flowers. The gentle expression on her face, the fluid folds of her garment, and the extreme precision of the details are characteristic of late 19th-century French academic sculpture. The warm, dark brown patina is preserved in excellent condition and highlights the bronze's refined finish. The sculpture rests on a round pedestal with a bronze border and is a remarkable piece.
