Description

This beautiful little solid wood cabinet embodies the elegance and sturdiness of period furniture, with remarkable craftsmanship. Entirely hand-carved, it is a testament to the exceptional craftsmanship typical of the 19th century. Featuring two hinged doors, it reveals a spacious interior, currently fitted with one shelf but offering the possibility of adding two more, thanks to its generously proportioned design. The doors with their high, rounded arches and the curved legs add a touch of refinement to its silhouette, while the offset cornice enhances its majestic appearance. Finely crafted bronze ornaments adorn the doors and sides, adding a luxurious dimension to this piece, which is already imposing in its mass and solidity. The antique lock, operated by an S-shaped key, is a rare and precious detail: it attests not only to the piece's authenticity but also to the high quality of its mechanics, designed to last for centuries. The wood, believed to be elm--though this identification must be confirmed by an expert--features a fine grain and a warm patina, typical of furniture from this period. Its imposing dimensions (height 211 cm, width without cornice 132 cm, with cornice 152 cm, exterior depth 63 cm, interior depth 54 cm) make it a centerpiece, capable of blending with distinction into a classic or contemporary interior. Ideal for lovers of characterful antiques, this cabinet combines functionality and aesthetics while preserving the authenticity of an era when furniture was designed to last for generations.
