Description

Here is a vintage three-piece living room set, typical of the "crapaud" style, combining a sturdy frame with timeless elegance. This set consists of a two-seater sofa and two matching armchairs, all upholstered in beige velvet adorned with subtle floral patterns, evoking the bourgeois living rooms of the 19th century. The sofa, 150 cm wide, rests on spindle legs, adding a touch of authenticity and stability. The two armchairs, meanwhile, feature straight legs, harmonizing the set while adhering to the aesthetic conventions of the era. Although these legs were added at a later date, they have been upholstered to match the originals, thus preserving the set's visual unity and original charm. The overall condition of this set is remarkably clean. A few small, discreet stains--nothing serious--bear witness to its past use but in no way detract from its noble appearance and decorative potential. The seat height, approximately 35 cm, offers comfort suitable for everyday use or for display as a collector's piece. The armchairs, approximately 74 cm wide, perfectly complement this set, making it ideal for a living room, an office, or a reception area. With its understated style and warm velvet, this living room set will blend gracefully into a classic interior, a home with character, or even a professional space seeking a touch of authenticity. Its timeless design and solid craftsmanship make it a piece that is both functional and aesthetically pleasing, sure to appeal to lovers of antiques and quality furniture.
